The Sculptors Of Mapungubwe By

The Sculptors of Mapungubwe is as great a book as all of Zakes Mda's. I have read his Memoir and Black Diamonds. I came out of all his books fulfilled and confident that South African literature is alive and well. The book relates the story of the son of the Royal Sculptors, Chats and Rendani.

The Sculptors of Mapungubwe by Zakes Mda - Goodreads

Ageless and contemporary, deceptive in its simplicity and mythical in its scope, The Sculptors of Mapungubwe encompasses all we know of love, envy, and the artist's primal power to forge art from nature and nature into art. Mda's newest novel will only strengthen his international reputation as one of the most trenchant voices of South Africa.

The Sculptors of Mapungubwe, Mda

The Sculptors of Mapungubwe is not a strictly historical novel -- Mda's concerns and interests are as much in the characters, and specifically Rendani and Chata's roles as artists -- but Mda does provide an interesting introduction to this generally thriving but also fragile kingdom. Part of the global marketplace of the time, it attracted traders from far away (mainly because of the local gold, but also, more problematically, because of foreign interest in rhino horns).

Mapungubwe, located in the very north of South Africa just below the Limpopo River, was an Iron Age settlement and kingdom which flourished between the 11th and 13th century CE. It was perhaps southern Africa's first state. Mapungubwe, whose name means either 'stone monuments' in reference to the large stone houses and walls of the site or 'hill of the jackal', prospered due to the ...
